

KALABAGH

Kalabagh is a historic town located on the western bank of the Indus River in District Mianwali, Punjab, Pakistan. It is famous for its rich history, cultural heritage, and natural resources. The town was once a princely state and home to the influential Nawabs of Kalabagh, who played a prominent role in regional politics. Kalabagh is also well known for its iron ore deposits, picturesque landscape, and traditional architecture, with houses built along the rugged hills of the Salt Range.

The town holds strategic significance because of its location on the Indus River and its connection with the famous but controversial Kalabagh Dam Project. Apart from politics and resources, Kalabagh is admired for its scenic views, blending the river, hills, and historic structures, making it an important place in the cultural and political history of Punjab.
